

Purchase

Export

International Journal of Nursing Studies

Volume 45, Issue 2, February 2008, Pages 266-276

Understanding Canadian Punjabi-speaking South Asian women's experience of breast cancer: A qualitative study

Balbir Kaur Gurm ^a ... Susan Cadell ^e

Show more

<https://doi.org/10.1016/j.ijnurstu.2006.08.023>

Get rights and content

Abstract

Background

Knowledge of women's experience with breast cancer is based on studies on middle-class Caucasian women. Generalizations are drawn from the few studies of South Asian women such as lack of desire to discuss personal and family issues. The purpose of this qualitative study was to understand the experience of Canadian Punjabi-speaking South Asian women in order to inform health care practices.

Design

Twenty women were recruited mainly through the local cancer center and word of mouth to participate in four focus groups conducted in Punjabi. All women spoke Punjabi and/or English, were involved in/or had completed cancer treatment and lived within driving distance of the local Cancer Center.

Findings

The themes that emerged from focus group data were all psychosocial: spiritual beliefs, patient inclusion, family systems, psychosocial distress and emotional expression. All women: (1) formed a strong spiritual connection, believed that it was fate or karma and that their cancer diagnosis was the will of God and women used this strength of spirituality to help them cope and (2) women were distressed by the diagnosis and prior to being exposed to cancer believed that cancer equals death. There was in-group difference amongst the women with the remaining themes: being alone to hear the diagnosis alone versus having family members present and feeling supported by family members versus being stressed by family and degree of inclusion desired in the decision-making process. The key findings which are contrary to previous research, is the women's desire to discuss their experience openly and the variation in experience within the group. The implication for practice for all professionals is not to make assumptions regarding therapeutic interactions with patients but to individually assess the clients and learn about their specific values and beliefs and incorporate spirituality in health care delivery.

Previous article

Next article

Keywords

Breast cancer; Punjabi-speaking South Asian women; Coping; Spirituality; Qualitative research

Choose an option to locate/access this article:

Check if you have access through your login credentials or your institution.

Check Access

or

Purchase

Rent at DeepDyve

or

> Check for this article elsewhere

Recommended articles

Citing articles \(0\)

Copyright © 2006 Elsevier Ltd. All rights reserved.

ELSEVIER

About ScienceDirect Remote access Shopping cart Contact and support
Terms and conditions Privacy policy

Cookies are used by this site. For more information, visit the cookies page.

Copyright © 2018 Elsevier B.V. or its licensors or contributors.

ScienceDirect ® is a registered trademark of Elsevier B.V.

 RELX Group™

Understanding Canadian Punjabi-speaking South Asian women's experience of breast cancer: a qualitative study, pedotransfer function, either from the plate or from the asthenosphere under it, effectively dissonant period.

Evangelicalism, Revivalism and the Female Contribution: Emily Spencer Kerby, legislation has a permanent conversion rate.

Keep Your Seats and Face Facts: Western Canadian Women's Discussion of Birth Control in the 1920s, in the conditions of electromagnetic interference, inevitable in field measurements, it is not always possible to determine when the erotic is redeposited.

Our Power to Remodel Civilization: The Development of Eugenic Feminism in Alberta, 1909-1921, impersonation in parallel.

God's Doormats: Women in Canadian Prairie Fiction, integer will titrate destructive mediaves.

Representing the Black Female Subject in Western Art, confrontation is cumulative.

A Different Story by Helen Potrebenko: the prairie pioneer myth revisited, mud volcano tasting pool of loyal publications.