AFRICAN STUDIES SERIES

West African States:
Failure and Promise

A Study in Comparative Politics

Edited by JOHN DUNN

This book examines the recent political development of seven West African coastal states, seeking to explain why their development has been so very diverse and why it has in most cases so severely disappointed the hopes of their own citizens at independence. All of the contributors are experts on the countries which they analyse and all are actively concerned with recent debates on the political economy of post-colonial Africa and the claims and limitations of different styles of comparative political analysis.

She compares first and second generation immigrants - those born in their rural homelands and those born in Ghana - in terms of their orientation to politics, to kinship, and to community participation.

THEMES IN THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Domestication of the Savage Mind

JACK GOODY

Professor Goody attempts to explain certain differences in the 'mind' of human societies by relating certain broad differences in 'mentalities' to the changes in the means of communication, and specifically to the series of shifts involved in the development of writing. The argument is based upon theoretical considerations, as well as empirical evidence derived from recent fieldwork in West Africa and the study of a wide range of source material on the ancient societies of the Near East.
