In lieu of an abstract, here is a brief excerpt of the content:

194 Western American Literature The Roundup Quarterly. Edited by Judy Alter. (Fort Worth: Texas Christian University Press.) The Roundup Quarterly, a new journal from Western Writers of America, Inc., features articles on the history and literature of the American West, and includes book reviews and "The West in Print," a listing of current publications. The Roundup Quarterly is published by Texas Christian University Press. Subscriptions are $30.00 a year for nonmembers of WWA, and are available from Barbara Ketchum, WWA Secretary-Treasurer, 1753 Victoria, Sheridan WY 82801. Manuscripts should be sent to Judy Alter, Editor, The Roundup Quarterly, Box 30783, Fort Worth, TX 76129. Book review queries and books for review should go to A. Tracy Row, Book Review Editor, at the same address. DANA BRUNVAND Utah State University Lady of No Man's Land. By Jeanne Williams. (New York: St. Martin's Press, 1988. 382 pages, $19.95.) Lady of No Man's Land is a historical romance which has been selected by Reader's Digest Condensed Books. Based on factual accounts of "sewing women," this novel follows Swedish immigrant Kristen Mordal as she makes her way in the West alone. Williams has done her homework, researching the history of the plains with particular emphasis on women's roles. Kristen's livelihood parallels that of some single women of the period, as she stays with various families for three months at a time in exchange for sewing a year's worth of clothing for them. Intertwined with details of historical significance is Kristen's romantic dilemma: should she wait for her true love, the married guy, or take the rich, devoted suitor who will solve her economic woes?
