Shaping Theology: Engagements in a Religious and Secular World

David Ford

Blackwell (2007)

Abstract

Ford has developed the relationship between theology and each of these other spheres, but this is the first volume to bring together a complete and well-rounded account of theology's interaction with all its conversation partners. An innovative book about the shape of theology in reaction to its relationship with the Church, with theologians, with other religions, and with the university. Written by David Ford, recognized internationally as one of the most creative of contemporary theologians. Considers how theology shapes other areas of life via its conversations in the public sphere and with non-faith communities. Views theology as both a way of thinking and a way of living, and considers how this lived character cannot be entirely grasped through reason alone. The first volume to bring together a complete and well-rounded account of theology's interaction with all its conversation partners.
