Edward Bliss Emerson: The Blazing Star of a Complex Constellation

Silvia E. Rabionet, Nova Southeastern University

Abstract

Edward Bliss Emerson, a younger brother of Ralph Waldo Emerson, a scholar in his own right, traveled to the West Indies at the age of 18 to alleviate his pulmonary afflictions. While in the islands, from 1831 to 1832, he logged his daily activities in a pocket journal. This revealing journal, detailing Edward's childhood, his years at Harvard, and his career as a doctor and lawyer. This biographical essay aims to enhance the enjoyment of the journal. It unveils defining stages in Edward's life through a variety of archival documents, the author illustrates how these circumstances and places, while renewing his quest for purpose.
