Abstract:

This thesis will serve as a culmination of my activities and unique experiences as a member and leader of the Indiana Junior Angus Association (IJAA). It is a "capstone" project because it not only combined major parts of my education, but also separate parts of my life. My Mathematics and Foundations of Business minor has proven useful in my position as BAA treasurer since 1994. Through a journal-type review of my activities and responsibilities, I hope to describe the many lessons I have learned that went beyond my classroom activities. My involvement with the IJAA began at the age of nine, and has continued through my college years. The hands on and real world experiences provided an opportunity for me to expand my horizons and become familiar with the workings of a non-profit organization. For the past two years I have played a major part in the planning and production of the 1998 National Junior Angus Show, which was hosted in Indiana by the Indiana Junior Angus Association. The final budget was over $110,000, with $30,000 of income from the Indiana Livestock Promotion and Development Fund grant. This thesis will highlight the following: the activities of the National and State Junior Angus Associations, the purpose of the Indiana Livestock Promotion and Development Fund, and our application process. My book keeping style, investments made, and future plans.

of the organization. Committee chairs and activities fundamental to hosting a successful scholarship reimbursement process associated with the Indiana Livestock Promotion and Development Fund.
