Abstract or Summary

Meniscus is a literary journal, published and supported by the Australasian Association of Writing Professionals with editors from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. The title of the journal was the result of two of the editors to the National Gallery of Australia in Canberra, where James Turrell's extraordinary installation, "Within without" (2010), led them to think about how surfaces, curves, tension and light. In particular, they were struck by the way in which the surface of the water features, and the uncertainty of water's containment, seems to analogue the excitement and anxiety inherent in creative practice, a balance between possibility and impossibility that is found in much good writing.

Additional Information: Editorial This is our third anniversary edition and it's reassuring to see so many writers who offered work in our first volume, August 2013, continuing to submit to our online open access literary journal, in 2016. Despite the diversity of style and form, and a lot of poetry once again in this issue, there's also a strong theme of place; emotional, physical locality, houses, countries, towns, and planes "watery, airy, eerie and ethereal" are explored. In keeping with our original goals to become an international journal, we welcome yet more writers from North America and for the first time, Africa, to our list of contributors from the UK, Australia and New Zealand, in Volume 4 issue 2, in what can only be described as a bumper issue of 46 submissions. Particular thanks are due to Daniel Juckes as editorial assistant and wrangled the many applications and the new format with aplomb, and Paul Munden for his fine work as publishing editor. In celebration we are publishing some prizewinning work, from recent competitions. First prize goes to the Canberra Health Poetry Prize, whose judges commented: Three poems stood out as prizewinners. Third prize goes to Andy Jackson's poem, "There was no coffee". Its seemingly inconsolable title is countered by a poem that accumulates simple, intriguing detail, beautifully structured on the page. Second prize goes to Sarah's prose poem, "Mungo", a highly evocative piece of writing with some beautiful imagery. Its telescopic movements reveal subtle understandings between human beings.

sustenance. First prize is awarded to Shari Kocher for her poem, "The Glimpse with great economy from a sense of struggle to an embrace of the world, and a delight. Its increasingly richly textured language is precise while retaining a sense of elusive. Second, the AAWP's Emerging Writer's Prize, administered by Prendergast, who writes: The Australasian Association of Writing Programs (AAWP) with the Ubud Writers and Readers Festival (UWRF) offers a prize for Emerging prose or poetry. The 2016 competition theme was "Tat Tvam Asi" which is a concept meaning "I am you, you are me". The nuanced and innovative re-interpretation of the theme made the judges' task extremely difficult. The overall quality of submissions was overwhelming. The AAWP would like to offer warm wishes to all writers for their original contributions. ... Gail Pittaway for Meniscus editors
