Abstract

This paper examines pilgrimage-related tourism among members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (commonly called the Mormon church) by tracing the development of the church and associated pilgrimage destinations. While pilgrimage is not an official doctrine of the Mormon church, Mormons engage in travel patterns emphasizing visits to Mormon sites, creating pilgrimage tourism that includes visits to temples, Biblical sites, sites associated with the Book of Mormon, and historic places of the church. The most important pilgrimage destination is Salt Lake City, with the Temple Square receiving the greatest number of pilgrim tourists.
