Abstract or Attribute Name Summary

Values Dead or Less Himself is a novel concerning creative impotence and the ways in which people become repressed and stagnate through expectation, isolation, and over-analyzing. The novel takes place across high school to chart the ways the characters change or refuse to change as they "grow up." The novel is intended to be above all else an emotional, not necessarily rational, experience. The novel has been edited extensively. However it is far from a finished state. In conversation with peers and instructors it was found that various characters and dramas need to be expanded upon and or realized. Key Words: Fiction, Meta-Fiction, Novel, Creative
