Abstract

English

Reliving the Filipino classical music heritage: Preservation and the University of the Philippines-Diliman College of Music

This paper presents an overview of the classical era of music in the collection of the University of the Philippines (UP) College of Music. The music scores included in this collection were created by renowned Filipino composers. This paper discusses the initiatives done by the university and concerned faculty to preserve these music scores, as they are still always being played in concert. A restoration project is the first in the university since the UP College of Music moved to its new facility. A simple laboratory was set up by the project proponents and used for the restoration of originals, evaluation and documentation, deacidification, cleaning, and
