Abstract:

Contemporary biology presents us with a 3.5 billion year story of life, a story in which there is a great deal of pain and extinction of species. For theology, this means an intensification of the old problem of natural evil. This article takes care for individual sparrows. It proposes that we can think of the Spirit of God as being present in love to each creature now and of each creature finding redemption in Christ. It explores possible ways of understanding the meaning of the Christ-Event for individual sparrows.
