Summary	We discuss the emergence of the craft movement known as the 'knit and stitch' movement, particularly among women, this movement organises in local communities and uses the Internet. The women meet to knit, stitch and talk, share ideas and exchange. At the same time, their presence can be seen, in the workplace and in wider society. We introduce a framework for the study of craft, in the form of organising, discussing (1) remedial, (2) progressive and (3) celebratory possibilities and we draw on illustrative interview data to outline the experience of women in the craft movement.
